A Richmond Artist in Munich.

MUNICH, September, 1878.

Dear Dispatch: It has been my intention for some time to give you an article concerning the great picture-galleries, the art-schools, and a synopsis of the doings and workings of artists in Munich. As there is really so very, very much to tell, I shall necessarily be brief, and make the article continuous. I shall begin with the two largest galleries of Munich-the Old and New Pinakothek. The New Pinakothek is an oblong, unpretentious gray building, standing in a simple park about two-thirds as large as our Capitol Square. It is 368 feet long, 100 feet wide, and 90 feet high, to the projecture of that part which lights the interior. The style of architecture is Byzantine. The exterior around the upper part is ornamented with frescoes after the compositions of Kaulbach. Exposed to all kinds of weather, they are becoming somewhat dim, having been executed in the year 1853. The interior is divided into two floors-the lower floor being devoted to the exhibition of porcelainpaintings, busts of distinguished artists and learned men cast in plaster, photographs, cartoons, &c. The upper floor is used for the exhibition of oil-paintings exclusively, being divided into six large and five smaller saloons and fourteen cabinets. As it would such as would interest you.

In the first saloon is the celebrated picture by Karl von Piloty, the present director of the Munich Academy of Painting— "Thusnelda in the triumphal procession of Germanicus." This is a very elaborate painting; I believe the largest ever painted by this artist. In the same saloon is his work than the first. "The Deluge," by mains unfinished. The expression of the different faces is very realistic. The dead, dying, and living are wonderfully grouped. It is one of those paintings which, when once looked upon, are never to be forgotten. The figures are more than life-size. Three of such paintings would easily cover the front of the Dispatch building. In the next saloon we find the "Destruction of Jerusalem," by Kaulbach. This is also an immense canvas, the figures being life-size. There are twenty-two paintings in the building by this artist. The walls of the remainder of the saloons and cabinets are covered with large and small works by eminent artists, every branch of painting being represented. As a mass, there is too much conventionality in the paintings to give them any great consideration. Here and there we find a canvas with some origi-

The only painting by an American artist that is catalogued in either the new or the old gallery is a "View of Giar-dino di Malta at Rome," by Washington Aliston, in the New Pinakothek. In this building there are about 450 paintings. The Old Pinakothek (situated in the adjoining park) has so much similarity with the New that a hasty description of the building is unnecessary. This is the most interesting resort for artists and lovers of art in Mu-The lower floor of this building is devoted to the exhibition of valuable engravings, etchings, water-colors, &c.; the collection being an excellent one. place is continually well patronized in favorable weather by copyists. Ascending the immense stairway to the upper floor we enter. The beauty of visiting these places to look at the pictures is, one never finds them uncomfortably crowded. Everywhere we find people copying. I believe they have the finest collection of original Rubens's here. Vandyke, Velazquez, and Murillo are well represented. Of the latter we find those beautiful paintings of the street-boys that have been chromoed all over the world. The small cabinets filled with the old Dutch masters are really magnificent. Some of the still lives here of these men are the finest in the world. One thing noteworthy on every occasion when I visited these galleries, on all sides I heard comments in English. One can find Americans and Englishmen here at any time. In this old gallery there are more than four hundred pictures, the size varying from about eight inches square to some as large as any in the New Pinakothek. Very respectfully, your obedient servant,

THE COMMERCIAL BARBECUE IN CHESTER-FIELD YESTERDAY .- In response to a courteons invitation of Mr. James R. Werth, general superintendent of the Brighthope Railway Company, a Dispatch man attended the barbecue given by this company near their coal-pits, in Chesterfield, yesterday. Promptly at 9:30 o'clock the special train, consisting of three cars, left the Byrd-Street depôt, in charge of Mr. Werth and Mr. T. C. Jones, secretary of the Brighthope Company. Among the gentlemen present were Messrs. John H. Montague, P. H. Mayo, Hours.— Washington, October 22.—A storm | Lucien L. Bass, Stephen Putney, J. Pendle-South Carolina. After a brief but very pleasant ride the party reached Clover-Hill station, and were invited into Superintendent Werth's reception-room. After partaking of refreshments they were escorted to the coal-pits, and had the pleasure and satisfaction of witnessing rains, winds shifting to colder northwest- the mining operations of this enterprising company; a few only, however, having the courage to venture "down into the coalmines underneath the ground." The business part of the trip being concluded, the party were invited to partake of a sumptuous barbecue, prepared and served in the shades of Chesterfield pines. This part of the day's entertainment was heartily enjoyed by all, and it was the unanimous verdict that Mr. Werth and his assistants were not only good miners, but caterers of the very highest order. In fact, one of the witty Richmonders remarked that if Werth's body was as big as his heart that Chesterfield would certainly be able to boast of one giant. Having done full justice to the repast in the pines, the visitors were again summoned to the reception-hall, where there was a feast of reason and flow of soul. Responses to toasts were made by Messrs. Werth, John H. Montague, Colonel William E. Tanner, J. H. Knowles; J. A. Curtis, R. L. Walker, and others. And here ended the hospitalities of the Brighthope Railway Company, and at 4 o'clock the engineer sounded the signal of departure and the excursionists were soon on their journey homeward-a gay, happy, and delighted set. After a brief ride on the rail Richmond was reached, and all were of the opinion that no one ever spent a more pleasant day in Chesterfield, and that no more efficient, polite, and genial officers live among us T. New Phase of the Atlantic. Missisis sippl and Ohio Bailroad Case.

PETITION OF DUTCH BONDHOLDERS OF THE ATLANTIC, MISSISSIPPI AND OHIO NOW-THEIR REASONS THEREFOR-THE DECREE OF SALE AS PROPOSED BY THE Mississippi and Obio interest-funding notes, ENGLISH BONDHOLDERS PREPARED FOR THE COURT TO ACT UPON-ARGUMENT OF COUNSEL COMMENCED.

The case of the Atlantic, Mississippi and Ohio railroad again engages the attention 1878, is $1,695,289.75. of the United States Circuit Court. Judges Bond and Hughes were both on the bench yesterday to hear a motion for decree of foreclosure and sale, when the counsel of the Dutch bondholders appeared and revived a petition, making complaint that the trustees (Francis Skiddy, William Butler Duncan, and S. L. M. Barlow) are active and zealous partisans of the English bondholders; that the two interests conflict, and that the Dutch bondholders have not been handsomely treated by the said trustees and their counsel, Messrs. W. D. Shipman and W. W. McFarlane, of New York.

Messrs. Shipman and McFarlane were present to answer for themselves and the trustees. Messrs. W. W. Henry, of Richmond, and S. L. Farish and Ashlul Green represented the Dutch bondholders, and Hon. Joseph H. Choate, of New York, the English bondholders. Attornev-General Field, on the part of the State of Virginia, and Colonel W. W. Gordon, General T. M. Logan, Judge W. W. Crump, Major C. S. Stringfellow, Captain John Lyon, Judge Robert Ould, Major T. J. Kirkpatrick, Mr. W. L. Royall, and numerous other members of the bar, were present either as counsel for parties directly in interest, or as being concerned some way in the result of the pending suit.

The fight on this petition was, however, left entirely between counsel for trustees and Dutch bondholders. General William Mahone, who was present, did not show any particular concern about the fate of either one side or the other; though on one hand it was intimated pretty broadly that the Dutch bondholders are in collusion with the Atlantic, Mississippi and Ohio Company, and on the other, Mr. John Collinson, of the English bondholders' committee, who is not especially loved by General Mahone, was the subject of some remarks of antagonistic

WHAT THE DUTCHMEN WANT. Speeches were made on behalf of petitioners by Messrs. Henry and S. L. Farish, and against them by Messrs. McFarlane and Shipman.

The Dutch bondholders by their petition for the foreclosure of the Atlantic, Mississippi and Ohio consolidated mortgage in order that they may protect their own interest in the litigation. They represent over two millions of the entire loan, which loan is nearly five and one-half millions. The reasons that they assign are that the ring the year one hundred and fifty-three at trustees who bring the suit and are the plaintiffs upon the record, have allied them- tal-cards. The report was received. selves with the English bondholders who are represented by Mr. John Collinson, and who hold about the same number of bonds of the Public Health Association of the as the Dutch committee, represented by Mr. United States will be held in this city be-

James C. Parrish. They allege that as a result of this alliance this suit is being conducted in the interest of the English committee, and to the injury of the Dutch. The trustees, they say, amongst other things, have loaned themselves to the carrying out of the reorganization scheme proposed by the English, whereby the control of the road will be given in perpetuity to a committee of four Englishmen, who appoint their own suc- P. M. cessors in case of vacancies, and who will manage the road from London. The Dutch say that the decree of sale asked for at this time by the trustees is intended to aid the English in obtaining possession of the road, and is drawn with that end in view. If the English succeed in obtaining a decree at the present time, it is understood that they have made their engagements to make the purchase; and in that event they propose to cut off the Dutch and other nonassenting bondholders at about eighteen cents on the dollar, or less.

The Dutch desire, and have proposed, a liberal plan of reorganization, as they claim, giving equal rights to all the holders of the consolidated mortgage bonds.

THE POSITION OF THE TRUSTEES. Mr. McFarlane made the main speech against the prayer of the petitioners. He described the Atlantic, Mississippi and Ohio | for forty-eight hours. railroad "tottering to decay and confusion" when the trustees and receivers took J. Haynes, was settled by the parties. charge, and claimed that they had put it in fine condition. So well had they discharged their duty under the direction of this court it had become a subject of congratulation and commendation not only here, but had raised the credit of our courts abroad. He declared that the petition was "peurile white, 45,300; colored, 33,700. Rate of and absurd," and that it was the basest threatening to kill Andrew Josylin, was ingratitude for "these Dutchmen" to criticise the trustees who have done so much so well. Mr. McFarlane maintained that the trustees were acting for all the bondholders, and that if the Dutch bondholders' prayer was granted every one of the bondholders of the million not represented by either the Dutch or English committees would have the same right to ask to be made parties to the record. entertained with any regard for the rules of the last on Friday, November 1st. All who law. He defended the trustees from the wish a delightful trip and an opportunity charge of partisanry in endorsing the English scheme of reorganization. One of the propositions of petitioners he idiotic"-another as "bordering on downof the English in looking after the welfare of the Dutch, he asserted that there was no more "comparison between them than between an industrious human being and a protoplasm."

But Mr. McFarlane rested his case mainly on principles of law which he cited, and which he declared would not permit the Dutch bondholders to be parties defendant, now that the suit has been conducted almost to a final hearing by the trustees.

At 3:30 o'clock Mr. McFarlane concluded and the court adjourned. THE DECREE. The decree applied for by the trustees of the Atlantic, Mississippi and Obio consolidated bonds asks for: 1. A sale of the whole line of the Atlantic, Mississippi and Ohio railroad and its property as an entirety, subject to the liens of the several divisional bonds. 2. The master shall make the sale at Rich-
